BIOGRAPHICAL/HISTORY NOTE

The American Film Institute (AFI) was established by a presidential mandate from President Lyndon B. Johnson in the Rose Garden of the White House in 1965. This decree established the American Film Institute as a national arts organization to preserve the legacy of American film heritage, educate the next generation of filmmakers and honor the artists and their work. Two years later, in 1967, the AFI was established, supported by funding from the National Endowment for the Arts (NEA), the Motion Picture Association of American (MPAA), and the Ford Foundation. Two years after that, in 1969, the Center for Advanced Film Studies (CAFS) was established as a training program for filmmakers – in the 1980s the name changed to, the Center for Advanced Film and Television Studies (CAFTS). The training program eventually became the AFI Conservatory, an accredited graduate school with five disciplines – directing, cinematography, screenwriting, editing, and production design.

In 1974, the Directing Workshop for Women (DWW or DWW+) was founded as a production-based training program committed to increasing the number of women working professionally in screen directing. Other programs established by the AFI include AFI Awards, celebrating the ten outstanding films and television programs of the year; AFI Catalog of Feature Films, a printed and online written reference of all feature films produced during the first 100 years of film; AFI Life Achievement Award, honoring an individual for an outstanding career in the motion picture industry; AFI 100 Years..., series of television events and movie reference lists; AFI Docs and AFI Fest, two annual film festivals; Seminars, curriculum-based filmmaker seminars and public training seminars.
